FIRST AID TO TOMMY ATKINS.

FIRST AID TO TOMMY ATKINS.

SIR.—I visited the Military Exhibition the other day according to your instructions, my bosom glowing with patriotic ardour. If anything besides your instructions and the general appropriateness of the occasion had been necessary to make my bosom glow thus, it would have been found in the fact that I formerly served my country in a Yeomany Regiment. I shall never forget the glorious occasions on which I wore a cavalry uniform, and induced some of my best friends to believe I had gone to the dogs and enlisted. However, to relate my Yeomany adventures, which included a charge by six of us upon a whole army, would be to stray from my point, which is to describe what I saw at the Military Exhibition. I was lame (oh, dear no, not the gout, a mere strain) and took a friend, an amiable young man, with me to lean upon. "There's one place I really do know." he had said to me, 'and that's this bally place."

It was lame (oh, dear no, not the gout, a mise young man, with me to lean upon. "There's one place I really do know." he had said to me, 'and that's this bally place."

The performance in the arena so deeply interested me that I forget all about the pictures. I saw at once what it was. Detachments of our citizen soldiers were going through ambulance drill. The sight was one which appealed to our common humanity. My daring, dangerous Yeomany days rose up again before me, and I felt that if ever I had had to bleed for my Curax I should not have bled untended. Even my companion, a scoffer, who had never risen above a full privacy in the Eton Yolunteers, was strangely moved. Three were, I think, ten detachments, each provided with a stretcher and a bag containing simple surgical appliances. All that was wanted to complete the realism of the picture was the boom of the cannon, the bursting of shells, and the rattle of musketry. In imagination I supplied them,

We breathed again.

And now began some charming manœuvres. Each detachment walked round its stretcher twice, then stood at ease again, then at attention, then dressed up and arranged itself, and brushed itself down. All this while their wounded comrades lay writhing, and appealing for help in vain. It was with difficulty that, lame as I was, I could be restrained from dashing to their aid. But at last everything was in order. Stretchers were solemnly lifted. The detachments marched slowly forward, and deposited their stretchers each beside a wounded man. Then began a scene of busy bandaging. But not until the whole ten had been bound up, legs, arms, heads, feet, fingers &c., was it permissible to lift one of them from the celd cold ground which he had bedewed with his blood.

"Now then," said the Sergeant, "carefully and all together.

Lift!" and all together they were lifted and placed in their stretchers. More play with straps and buckles, more rising and stooping, and then the pale and gasping burdens were at last raised and carried in a mountful procession round the ground. But when they arrived at the place where the ambulance was supposed to be, they had all been dead three quarters of an hour. "Dear me," said the Sergeant, "how vexing. Korinson, your chin-strap's gone wrong. Now, all together. Drop 'em!" And so the day ended, and the pitliess sun sated with, &o., &o., &o.

I afterwards visited the Field Hospital to see a number of wax figures in uniform, cheerfully arranged as wounded men in all the stages of pain and misery. How encouraging for Tommy Atkins, I thought to myself; but at this moment my supporter informed me that he had remembered where to find the battle-pictures, and thither therefore we proceeded, thankful in the knowledge that if either of us ever happened to be struck down in battle he would be well looked after by an admirably drilled body of men.

THE PROFESSIONAL GUEST AT A COUNTRY HOUSE.

THE PROFESSIONAL GUEST

AT A COUNTRY HOUSE.

Dram Mr. Punch,
Trusting that you take some interest in my fate, after the more or less pleasant (?) week I spent at Henley, I hasten to let you know that I am again visiting friends, though this time on terra frms, and that the customary trials of the "Professional Guest" are once more my portion. The very evening of my arrival, I discovered that a man with whom I had not been on speaking terms for years was to be my neighbour at dinner, and that a girl (who really I cannot understand any one asking to their house) with the strangest coloured hair, and the most unnaturally dark eyes, was taken in by the host, and called "darling" by the hostese. After dinner, which, by reason of the "range" being out of order, was of a rather limited type, they all played eards. That is a form of amusement I don't like—I can't afford it; and this, coupled with the fact that I was not asked to sing, somewhat damped my ardour as regards visiting strange houses.

A hard bed, and a distant more, kept me awake till break of day, when, for a brief space, I successfully wooed Morpheus. I think I alept for seven minutes. Then a loud beli rang, and, several doors on an upper floor were heavily banged. I heard the servants chattering as they went down to breakfast. Then there was silence, and once more I composed myself to rest, when the dreadest sound of all broke on my ear. The baby began to cry. Then I gave it up as hopeless, but it was with a sensation of being more dead than alive that I crawled down to breakfast—late, of course. One is always late the first morning in a strange house—one can never find one's things. I bore with my best professional smile the hearty chaff of my host the first morning in a strange house—one can never find one's things. I bore with my best professional smile the hearty chaff of my host how I hat a hearty man the first thing in the morning) and the audible remarks of the mark!) which extended not only over that same day, but several enouing ones.

I am not mark!) which extended not only over that same day, but several ensuing once.

I am not of a malice-bearing nature, but I do devoutly pray that she, too, may one day tasts the full horror of being tucked into a high dog-cart alongside of a man who you know cannot drive; that tortures, both meutal and physical, of a long walk down dusty roads and over clayey fields to see that old Elizabethan house "only a mile off;" or the loathing induced by a pic-nic among mouldering and utterly uninteresting ruins. All this I swallowed with the equanimity and patience born of many seasons of country-house visiting; I even interviewed the old family and old-fashioned cook, on the subject of a few new dishes, and I helped to entertain some of those strange aboriginal creatures called "the county." But the announcement one afternoon, that we were to spend the next in driving ten miles to attend a Primrose League Fele in the private grounds of a local magnate, proved too much for me. Shall you be surprised to hear that on the following morning I received an urgent telegram recalling me to town? My hostess was, or affected to be, overwhelmned that by my sudden departure I should miss the fets. I knew, however, that the "dyed" girl rejoiced, and in company with the objectionable man metaphorically threw up her hat.

As I passed through the Lodge-gates on my way to the station I almost vowed that I would never pay another visit again. But even as I write, an invitation was brought me. It is from my Aunt. She writes that she has taken charming rooms at Flatsands, and hopes I will go and stay with her there for a few days. She thinks the sea air will do me good. Perhaps it will. I shall write at once and accept.

THE ODD GIBL OUT.

FROM OUR YOTTING YORICK, P.A.

Aboard the Yot "Placid," bound for Copenhagen (I hope).
YOU told me when I set sail (I didn't set sail myself, you nderstand, but the men did it for me, or rather for my friends, Mr and Mrs. Skipper, to whose kindness I owe my present position which is far from a secure one,—but no matter), you said to me,

"Send me notes of your voyage to Sweden and Norway, and the land of Hamlet. You'll see lots of funny things, and you'll take a humoro is view of what isn't funny; send me your humorous views." Well, Sir, I sent you "Mr. Punch looking at the Midnight Sun," pretty humorous I think ("more pretty than humorous," you cabled to me at Bergen), and since that I have sent you several beautiful works of Art, in return for which I received another telegram from you saying, "No go." Send something funny." The last I sent ("The Church-going Bell," a pretty pea ant woman in a boat—"belle," you see) struck me as very humorous. The idea of people going to Church in a boat!

What was I to do? Well-here at last I Well-here at last I send you something which must be humorous. It looks like it. Mr. Pusch driving in Norway, in a cariole. Mr. Pusch anywhere is humorous; and with Tony too; though I am perfectly aware that Tosy, M.P., is in his place in the House; but then Tosy is ubarquitous.

Then breakfast. Then lunch. Then dinner. No drinking permitted between meals: to which regulation I am gradually becoming habituated. It is difficult to acquire new habits. Precious difficult in mid-ocean, where there isn't a tailor. [Humorous again, eh?] I now understand what is the meaning of "a Depression is crossing the Atlantic." There's an awful Depression hanging about the Baltie.

I send you a sketch" of Elsinore, as I thought it would be, and Elsinore as it is. Elsinore is like the Pumping Works at Barking Creek. And I've come all this way to see this!! Elsinore! I'd rather go Elsewhere-

That's funny, isn't it?—see "bark" substituted for "biq." the original word being "ubiquitous." This is the sort of "cuirdtesistren" at which they roar in Sweden.

It's all très bien (very well) but how the deuce can you be funny in the Baltic? Why call it Baltic? For days and nights at sea, sometimes up, more often down, and a sense of inability coming over me in the middle of the boundless deep. Alas, poor Yorick!

THE DYING SWAN.

(Latest Version, a long way after the Laureate.)

"THAMES 'SWAN UPFING."—The QUENN'S swanherd and the officials of the Dyers' and Vintners' Companies arrived at Windsor yesterday on their annual 'swan-upping' visit, for the purpose of marking or 'nicking' the swans and eygnets belonging to Han MAJESTY, and the Companies interested in the preservation of the birds that haunt the stream between London and Henley. It is said that the Thames swans are steadily decreasing owing to the traffic on the upper reaches of the river, and other causes detrimental to their breeding."—The Times.

July was wet,—a thing not rare— With sodden ground and chilly air; The sky presented everywhere A low-pitched roof of doleful grey;

With a rain-flusht flood the river ran; Adown it floated a dying Swan,

And loudly did lament.

It was the middle of the day,
The "Swanherd" and his men went on,
"Nicking" the cygnets as they went.

II. The "Swanherd" showed a blue-peaked nos

And white against the cold white sky
Shone many a face of those
Who o'er the upper reaches swept,
On swans and cygnets keeping an eye.
Dyers and Vintners, portly, mellow
Chasing the birds of the jetty bill
Through the reed clusters green and still;
And through the osier mazes crept
Many a cap-feathered crook-armed fellow.

The lene Swan's requiem amote the soul With the reverse of joy. It spake of sorrow, of outfalls queer, Dyeing the floods once full and clear; Of launches wildly galumphing by, Washing the banks into hollow and hole; Washing the banks into hollow and noie; Sometimes afar, and sometimes a-near. All-marring 'Anny's exuberant voice, With music strange and manifold, Howling out choruses loud and bold As when Bank-holidayites rejoice With concertinas, and the many-holed Shrill whistle of tin, till the riot is rolled Through aby backwaters, where swan-neare:

are; And greasy soraps of the Eche or Star, Waifs from the eads' oleaginous feeds, Emitting odours reskingly rank, Drift under the clumps of the water-weeds, And broken bottles invade the reeds, And the wavy swell of the many-barged tug Breaks, and befouls the green Thames' bank. And the steady decrease of the snow-plumed throng

That sail the upper Thames reaches among, Was prophesied in that plaintive song.

SOMETHING LIKE A REVOLUTION!

(From Our Own Correspondent on the Spot.)

Our Correspondent at Breakfast.

(who is of Irish extraction) thinks that the long-expected revolution must have commenced; "for," as he argues, "when everything is down, something is sure to be up." I think so too. I am now going to Government House. If I don't get this through, make complaint at the Post Office, for it will be their fault not mine.

9 A.M. - Am now at Head Quarters. Not much trouble getting here. 9 a.M.—Am now at Head Quarters. Not much trouble getting here. Came by a bussi, a local conveyance drawn by two horses, and much used by the humbler classes. On our road one of the steeds and the roof of the bussi were carried away by a shell, but as I was inside this cansed me little annoyance, and I got comfortably to my destination with the remainder. Just seen the President, who says laughingly, that "there has been practically nothing but restically nothing but restically nothing but resting but did not think much of it. Ho was in excellent spirits, and told me a funny story about the narrow escape of his mother-in-law. I am now off to see how the other side are progressing. If the Post Office people tell you they can't send my telegrams to you, refuse to believe them.

10 a.m.—As I suspected, from the first, there has been a disturbance. I thought it must be so, as I could not otherwise understand why my cabbi should have been blown into the air, while passing through a mined street on the road here. I am now at the Head Quarters of the Onionni, who seem to be in great strength. They appear to be mined street on the road here. I am now at the Head Quarters of the Oniononi, who seem to be in great strength. They appear to be very pleased that the fleet should have joined them, and account for the action by saying that the sailors, as bad shots, would naturally blaze away at the biggest target—Government House. So far, the disturbances have eaused little inconvenience. I date this 10 A.M., but I cannot tell you the exact time, as the clock—tower has just been carried away by a new kind of land torpedo.

12, Noon.—I am now once again at the Government Head Quarters. As I could get no better conveyance. I inflated my canvas carpet-hag with gas, and used it as a balloon. I found it most valuable in crossing the battery which now masks the remains of what was once Government House. The Precident, after having organised a band of picpockstissis (desperadoes taken from the gaols), has gone into the provinces, declaring that he has a toothache. By some, this declaration

If you don't get Our Correspondent in an Eievated Position. this, make immediate complaint. Don't accept, as an excuse, that the wires have been cut, and the office razed to the ground. They can get it through, if they like.

4 F.M.—Just heard a report that I myself have been killed and buried. As I can get no corroboration of this statement, I publish it under reservation. I confine myself to saying that it may be true, although I have my doubts upon the subject.

6 F.M.—It seems (as I imagined) that the report of my death and funeral is a canard. This shows how necessary it is to test the truth of every item of information before hurrying off to the Telegraph Office. Efforts are now being made to bring about a reconciliation between the contending parties.

8 F.M.—The revolution is over. When both sides had exhausted their ammunition, peace naturally became a necessity. The contending parties are now dining together, al fresco, as the town is in ruins. Nothing more to add save, All's well that ends well!

NOTE FROM BRIGHTON.—The exterior of the recently-opened Hôtel Métropole, is so effective, that the Architect, Mr. Waternouse, R.A., is likely to receive many commissions for the erection of similar hostelries at our principal marine resorts. He will take out letters patent for change of name, and be known henceforward as Mr. Sza-Waternouse, R.A. By the way, the Directors of the Gordon Hotels Co. wish it to be generally known that they have not started a juvenile hotel for half-price children, under the name of the Gordon Bovs' Hotel.

OUR BOOKING-OFFICE.

Who remembers a certain story called, if I remember aright, The Wheelbarrow of Bordeaux, that appeared in a Christmas Number of the Illustrated London News some years ago? If no one else does, I do, says the Baron; and that sensational story was a sensational sell, wherein the agony was piled up to the "nt", and just as the secret was about to be disclosed, the only person who knew it, and was on the point of revealing it, died. This is the sort of thing that Mr. RUDYARD KIPLING has just done in this month's Lippincott's Magasine. It is told in a plain, rough and ready, hunt style, but so be that the likeness of the assassin remains on the retins of the victim's eye, and can be reproduced by photography,—is not a novelty. Perhaps this story in Lippincott comes out of one of Mr. RUDYARD KIPLING's pigeon-holes, and was just chucked in hapharard, because Editorial Lippincott wanted something with the name of the KIPLING, "bright and merry," to it. It's not very "bright," and it certainly isn't "merry."

Editorial Lippincott wanted something with the name of the Kipline, "bright and merry," to it. It's not very "bright," and it certainly isn't "merry."

Black's Guide to Kent for 1890, useful in many respects, but not quite up to date. The Baron cannot find any information about the splendid Golf Grounds, nor the Golf Club at Sandwich; it speaks of Sir Moses Moyfirform's place on the East Cliff of Ramsgate as if that benevolent centenarian were still alive; and it retains an old-fashioned description of Ramsgate as "The favourite resort of superior London tradesmen"—"which," says the Baron, "is, to my certain knowledge, very far from being the case." It talks of the "humours of the sands," and alludes to what is merely the cheap-trippers' season, as if this could possibly be the best time for Ramsgate. The Guide knows nothing, or at least says nothing, of the Winter attractions; of the excellent pack of harriers; of the delightful climate from mid-September to January; of the southern aspect; of the pure air; of the many excursions to Ash, Deal, Sandwich, Ickham, and so forth; nor can the Baron discover any mention of the Granville Hotel, nor of the Albion Club, nor of the sport for fishers and shooters; nor of the Riviera-like mornings in November and in the early Spring, which are the real attractions of Ramsgate, and make it one of the finest health-recorts in Winter for all "who love life, and would see good days." It reminds me," says the Baron, puffing of his smoke indignantly, "of Mr. Isvinc and a certain youthful critic, who, in his presence at supper, had been running down Macbeth, finding fault with the Lyocum production of it, and ridicaling Shaksprans for having written it. When he had quite finished, Hexrer Invine, 'laying low' in his chair at the table, adjusted his pince-nez, and, looking straight at the elever young gentleman, asked, in the mildest possible tone, 'My dear Sir, have you ever read Macbeth?' So," resumes the Baron, "I am inclined to ask Mr. Black's young man, 'Do you know Ramsgate?'

From the specimens of London City that have been sent for inspection by Measrs. Firild & Turn, of the Leadenhall Press, who are bringing it out, the Baron angures a grand result, artistically and financially. It is to be published at forty-two shillings, but subscribers will get it for a guinea, so intending possessors had evidently better become subscribers. The history of the Great City is to be told by Mr. W. J. LOFFIE, so that it starts with an elevated tone and the loftiest principles, and the illustrations will be by Mr. W. LUERE, a talented draughtsman who, as a Luker-on has seen most of the games in the City. In consequence of some piratical publisher having attempted to bring out a work under the same title, intended to deceive even the elect, Measrs. Fireld & Turn have secured the copyright of the title London City, by the ingenious device of publishing, for one farthing each, five hundred copies of a miniature pamphlet bearing this title, and containing the explanation. The value of these eccentric farthing pamphlets may one day be thousands of pounds. Mem.—Twopence would be well invested in purchasing four of them.

Salads and Sandwicks is an attractive title, specially at this season. The arrangement of the book is, like the salad, a little mixed. When, however, the knowing Baron finds that abomination known as salad dressing, or "salad mixing," which is sold at the grocer's, recommended by a writer who professes to teach salad-making, then he closes the book, and reads no more that day. This author, who is in his salad days, might bring out a book entitled How to Suck Eggs; or, Letters to my Grandmother. It is a suggestion worth considering, says

IN THE KNOW.

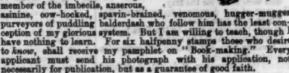

(By Mr. Punck's Own Prophet.)

I AM a modest man, as well as an honest one. Censure cannot move me by one hair's breadth from the narrow path of rectitude; praise cannot unduly puff me up. Had I been other than I am, this last week would have gone fatally near to ruining that timid and shrinking diffidence which (I say it without egotism) marks me off from the poisonous, pestilential, hydrocephalous, putty-faced, suetbrained reptiles who disgrace the profession to which I belong. All I wish now to do is to point out that I am the only prophet who indicated, without any beating about the bush, that Marvel would win the Stewards' Cup at Goodwood. My admirers have recognised the fact, and my private residence has been choked by an avalanche of congratulatory despatches, including two or three from some of the highest in the land. H. S. H., the Grand Duke of Preipenvory says:—"You have me with your writings much refreshed. I have the whole revenues of the Grand Duchy against one thousand flaschen of lager bier gebetted, and I have won him on your noble advice on Marvel. I make you Commander of the Honigthau Order." I marely cite this to show that my appreciators are not to one country confined—I mean, confined to one country.

What did I say last week, in speaking of the Stewards' Cup horses? By the well-known grammatical figure known as the hysteropoteros. I mentioned Marvel last, intending, of course, as even a buffalo-headed Bedlamite might have seen, that he should be first. And he was first. But to make assurance doubly sure, and to bring prophecy down to the intellectual level of a bat, I added, in speaking of the Stewards' Cup horses? "BEWARE!" 'Tis a voice from the shades, from the dark of three thousand long

But it falls like the red blade of RA, and should echo in Tyranny's ears

With the terror of overhead thunder; from Nile to the Neva it thrills,
And it speaks of the judgment of wrong, of the doom of imperious wills.

When PENTAOUR sang of the PHARAON, alone by Orontes, at bay, By the chariots compassed about of the foe who were fleroe for the fray, He sang of the dauntless oppressor, of Ra-

MEssa, conquering king;
But were there such voice by the Neva to-day,
of what now should he sing?
Of tyranny born out of time, of oppression
belated and vain?

Put up the old weapon, O despot, alack hand from the scourge and the chain; For the days of the PMARAOHS are done, and

For the days or the FMARAGHS are done, and the laurestee of tyranny mute, And the whistle of falchion and flail are not set to the chords of the late. True, the Hebrew, who bowed to the lash of the Pyramid-builders, bows still, For a time, to the knout of the Tank, to the Muscovite's merciless will;

But four millions of Israel's children are not to be crushed in the path
Of a Tear, like the Hittites of old, when great
RAMMERS flamed in his wrath

Alone through their numberless hosts. No, the days of the Titans of Wrong Are past, for the Truth is a torch, and the voice of the peoples is strong.

Even PRETACUR, the poet of Might, spake in pity that rings down the years of the life of "the peasant that tills" of his terrible toil and his tears;

Of the rats and the locusts that ravaged, and, worse, the tax-gathering horde
Who tithed all his pitiful tilth with the aid of the stick and the cord;
And the splendour of RAMESES pales in the text of the old Coptie Muse,
And—one hears the mad rush of the wheels that the fierce Red Sea billow pursues!

O Muscovite, blind in your wrath, with that the fierce Red Sea billow pursues!

O Muscovite, blind in your wrath, with your heal on the Israelite's neck,
And your hand on that baleful old blade,
Persecution, 'twere wisdom to reck
The Phanaon's calm warning. Beware!
Lo, the Pyramids pierce the grey gloom
Of a desert that is but a waste, by a river that is but a tomb,
Yet the Hebrew abides and is strong.
Ameneman is gone to the ghosts,
He the prince of the Coptic police who so harried the Israelite hosts
When their lives with hard-bondage were bitter. And now bitter bondage you'd try.
Proscription, and exile, and stern deprivation. Beware, Sire! Put by
That blade in its blood-rusted scabbard. The Phanaohs, the Casars have found That it wounds him who wields it; and you, though your victim there, prone on the ground.

ground,
Look helpless and hopeless, you also shall find
Persecution a bane
Which shall lead to a Red Sea of blood to o'erwhelm selfish Tyranny's train.

"Beware!" Tis the shade of MENEPHA that whispers the warning from far.
Concerning that sword there's a lesson the PHARAOH may teach to the TEAR!

County Councillors!

Conrad. Nay, speak; for though my mind be immature, one topic still can charm my infant car, that over craves the oft-repeated tale. I love to hear of that august Assembly (his Mother lifts her bonnet solemnly) in which my Mother's honoured voice is raised!

C's. M. (gratified). Learn, Connad, then, that, after many months of patient "lobying" (you've heard the term?) the measure by my foresight introduced has triumphad her

Con. My bosom thrills with dutiful delight —although I yet for information wait as to the scope and purpose of the statute.

C's. M. You show an interest so intelligent that well deserves it should be satisfied. Be seated, Connad, at your Mother's knee, and you shall hear the full particulars. You know how zealously I advocate the sacred cause of Nursery Reform? How through my efforts every infant's toys are carefully inspected once a month—?

Con. (wearily). Nay, Mother, you forget—I have no toys.

C's. M. Which brings you under the exemption clause. But—to resume; how Nursery Songs and Tales must now be duly licensed by our Censor, and any deviation from the text forbidden under heavy penalties? All that you know. Well; with concern of late.
I have remarked among our infancy the rapid increase of a baneful habit on which I scarce can bring my tongue to dwell. (The Stage darker; blind at back illuminated.) Oh, Connad, there are children—think of it—so lost to every sense of decency that, in mere wantonness or brainless sloth, they obstinately suck forbidden

C.'s M. (patting his head). Right shrewdly questioned, boy! I come to that. Some timid sentimentalists advised compulsory restraint in woollen gloves, or the deterrent aid of bitter aloes. I saw the evil had too deep a seat to yield to such half-hearted remedies. No; we must cut, ere we could hope to cure! Nay, interrupt me not; my Bill appoints a new official, by the style and title of "London County Council Scissorman," for the detection of young "suck-a-thumbs." "suck-a-thumbs.

[Here the shadow of a huge hand brandishing a gigantic pair of shears appears upon the blind.

Con. (hiding his face in his Mother's lap). Ah, Mother, see!.. be scissors!.. On the blind!

C's. M. Why, how you tremble! You've no cause to fear. The shadow of his grim insignia should have no terror-save for thumbsuckers.

Con. And what for them?

The Shadow slowly passes on the blind, Connad appearing relieved at its departure. Loud knocking without. Both start to their feet.

Con. (with a gloomy determination). More like his business, Madam, is with—Me!

Connad?

Connad?

Connad?

Connad?

Connad?

Connad.

The S. 'Tis not the law—which is a model of lucidity.

Con. (calmly). Sir, you speak well. My thumbs are forfeited, and they alone must pay the penalty.

The S. (weith approval). Right! Step with me into the outer hall, and have the business done without delay.

C's. M. (throwing herself between them).

Stay! I'm a Councillor—this law was mine! Hereby I do suspend the clause I drew.

The S. You should have drawn it milder.

Con, Must I teach a parent laws were meant to be obeyed?

pardon me?

Con. (bitterly, as he regards his maimed hands.) I will,—the day these pollards send forth shoots!

in combining office of Premier with that of Foreign Secretary.

"It would be too much even for us," said Strathedem, in couversation we had before House met; "and," he continued, "though I say it what shouldn't, I don't know any arrangement that would be happier or more complete than if we undertook the job. What do you say, Camperli? Would you be Premier, or would you take the Foreign Seals?"

"The Premier place is yours," said Camperli, gallantly; "at least, it is now. When we first started in life we used to call ourselves Camperli and Strathedem. You'll find it so in the Peerages of earlier date; now it's the other way about, and Strathedem takes the pas."

"That was entirely your doing, Camperli,

"A little awkward, don't you think," I ventured to say, edging in a word, "for you two fellows to take this strong stand against duality?"

"Not at all," said STRATHEDEN and CAMPBELL, both together; "we are authorities on the subject, and we say that the MARKISS cannot in his single person adequately perform the dual duties pertaining to his high offices; therefore we shall go and move our resolution protesting against arrangement."

Pretty to see them marching off. Always walk on tip-toe; ROSEBERRY says it is a practice adopted so as not to disturb each other when engaged in thinking out deep problems; two of the best and the happiest old fellows in the world; their only trouble is that on divisions their vote should count as only one. CAMPBELL, in whom hot Cupar blood flows, once proposed to raise question of privilege, but soothed by STRATHEDEN, who has in him a strong strain of the diplomatic character of his grandfather, Abinger.

"It's all very well for you," he continues, glowering at JOKIM, "to complain of your lot; but till you go into the earpet-eleaning line you never know what viciestices mean. One day, alighting from your four-in-hand, and happily able to spare to Tottenham Court Road a few moments from direction of national affairs, you look in at your shop; enter a lady who shop; enter a lady who says she wants a carpet cleaned. Did that ever happen to you at the Treasury?" MAPLE-BLUNDELL fiercely demanded. JOKIM forced to act that his infinite sorrows had never taken that particular turn.

"Very well, then," snapped MAPLE-BLUNDELL, "don't talk to me about your troubles. Now is the winter of our discontent, which is chilly enough; but, for my part, I often think that life would be endurable only for its SUMMERS."

Haven't often heard OLD MORALITY speak so bitterly; generally, even at worst time, overflowing with geniality; ready to take kindest view of circumstances, and hope for the best. But SUMMERS, surveying mankind from China to Peru in search of material for fresh conundrum, too much for mildest-mannered man. OLD MORALITY, goaded to verge of madness, jumps up; hotly declines to reply to SUMMERS; begs him to address his questions to Ministers to whose Department, they belonged.

Priday.—Still in our ashes live our wonted fires. Dwelling just now amid ashes of expiring Session; everything dull and deadly; pounding away at Local Taxation Bill; Scotch Members to the fore, for the fortieth time urging that the £40,000 allotted them in relief of school fees shall be made £90,000. House divides, and also for fortieth time says "No;" expect to go on with next Amendment; when suddenly Harcours springs on Old Monality's back, digs his knuckles into his eyes, bites his ear, and observes that he "has never seen a piece of more unexampled insolence." Old Monality, when he recovers breath, goes and tells the Master—I mean the Spraker. Spraker says Harcours shouldn't use language like that; so Harcours subsides, and incident closes as rapidly and suddenly as it opened. A little later Compton goes for Raikes; hints that he sub-edited for Hansard portions of a speech delivered in House on Post Office affairs. Raikes says "Noble Lord charged me with having deliberately falsified my speech." Comptons says he didn't. "Then, said Raikes, with pleading voice that went to every heart, "I wish the Noble Lord had the manliness to charge me with deliberate falsification." Compton refused to oblige; Raikes really depressed.

"Don't know what we're coming to, Toby," he said, "when one alraost goes om his knees to ask a man to charge him with deliberate falsification, and he won't do it. Thought better of Compton; see him in his true light now." Business done.—A good deal.

A SPORTING STYLE.

Our next example of a true sporting style will be constructed on the basis of Nos. 11, 12, and 13 of the Rules. These, it will be remembered, require the writer to refer to "the good old days;" to be haughty and contemptaous, with a parade of rugged honesty; to be vain and offensive, and to set himself up as an infallible judge of every branch of sport and athletics. This particular variety of style is always immensely effective. All the pot-boys of the Metropolis, most of the shady bookmakers, and a considerable proportion of the patrons of sport swear by it, and even the most thoughtful who read it cannot fail to be impressed by its splendour. This style deals in paragraphs. Second Example.—Event to be commented on: A Regatta.

I am led to believe by column upon column of wishy-washy twaddle in the morning papers, that Henley Regatta has actually taken place. The effete parasites of a decayed aristocracy who direct this gathering endeavour year after year to make the world believe that theirs is the only meeting at which honour has the least chance of bursting into flower. I have my own opinions on this point. Really, these tenth transmitters of foolish faces become more and more brazen in their attempts to palm off their miserable two-penny-halfpenny, tin-pot, one-horse Regatta as the combination of all the cardinal virtues.

These gentry presume to dictate to rowing men what shall constitute the status of the Amateur. For my own part (and the world will acknowledge that I have done some rowing in my time) I prefet the straight-forward conduct of any passing rag-and-bone merchant to the tricks of the high and mighty champions of the amateur qualification in whose nostrils the mere name of professional caraman seems to stink. Those pampered denizens of the amateur hothouse would, doubtless, wear a kid-glove before they ventured to shake hands with one who, like myself, despises them and their absurd pretensions.

kerous; Story is strenuous; Tarner tedious; and Dillow denunciatory. But there's something about Sunters that is peculiarly aggravating. In the first place, he is, as far as appearances go, such a quiet, amiable, inoffensive young man. Looking at him, one would think that butter wouldn't melt in his mouth, much less that Mixed Marriages in Malta should keep him awake at night, and the question of International Arbitration should lower his appetite. Yet you know how it is. He seems to have some leisure on his hands; uses it to formulate conundrums; comes down here, and propounds them to me. Just look at his list for to-night. "My analytical and practical experience of Pears' Soap now extends over a very lengthened period—nearly fifty years—during which time

I have never come across another

Toilet Soap which so closely comes up to my ideal of perfection.

Its purity is such that it may be used with perfect confidence upon the tenderest and most sensitive skin—EVEN THAT OF A NEW BORN BABE."
